THE OTHER SIDE.

A Springfield Male Republican objects to what a Springfield Female Republican had to say through the columns of "The Dispatch."

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 10.—[Correspondence.]—In Saturday's issue of THE EVENING DISPATCH, there appeared a communication over the signature of Mrs. S. A. Boyer, in regard to a matter that is being made much capital of here. Moreover I will say, knowing the lady as well as I do, I think she evidently did not intend to convey the impression, which is so apparent upon its face. I will quote one sentence which will answer my purpose:

"I attended the republican primary on the evening of the Fifth, and regret to say, was received very coolly." The following are the facts regarding the lady's reception. At the primary, referred to, there were but few present, in consequence of the inclemency of the weather. At the commencement of the proceedings a motion prevailed unanimously, that the "courtesies of the ladies be observed." During the deliberations, the lady made full use of the privilege. She nominated one delegate and one alternate, who were elected; made two speeches upon matters under discussion. Her motion to the effect that the delegates to the county convention use the influence to have a resolution favoring woman suffrage incorporated into the constitution of the new state of Utah, was voted down. The reason assigned by the opponents were that they did not believe this the time nor place to begin the work.

The fact that the lady's motion did not prevail, evidently caused her to take it as a personal affront, and hence her letter. When she has more experience in political matters, she will learn to take defeat, with the coolness and calmness of a veteran.

Very Respectfully,

D. C. JOHNSON.

N. B.—It is but fair to Mrs. Boyer to state that in her original manuscript the lady did not use the word "coolly." There were some words blurred and wholly illegible. The spirit of the letter, which was one of bitterness towards the stubborn rebels, was erased and words inserted to complete the sentence.

Resolutions of Condolence.

WHEREAS, In response to the summons of the Supreme Master of the Universe, to whose divine will all must meekly bow, our beloved brother, Richard Brereton, has departed his life, and

WHEREAS, By his decease we have been deprived of an esteemed member of our fraternity, his family an affectionate husband and father, the community one of its most influential and highly respected citizens, and humanity a benefactor and friend, and

WHEREAS, Realizing that our sojourn here is of short duration, that our lease of life is but temporary, and believing that

"There come a time near the setting sun, When the joys of life seem few, A gift will break in the evening dew, And the golden light stream through, And the soul a glorious bridge will make, Out of the golden bars, And all the priceless treasure take, Where shine the eternal stars."

Therefore, be it Resolved, That the members of Garden City Lodge No. 10 A. O. U. W. who, with the family of our deceased brother, and that copies of these resolutions be furnished to the Le Roy Mountain Workman and to each of our city papers, and that the same be spread upon the records of this lodge.

An Interesting Affidavit.

A friend hands us the following with the request that it be published. It is clipped from a Denver paper. The startling information contained in the affidavit should be known to every voter. Mr. Frederick A. Luckenbach is a citizen of Denver and is well and favorably known to many of Colorado's leading business men:

STATE OF COLORADO, county of Arapahoe, ss.

Frederick A. Luckenbach, being first sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am 62 years of age. I was born in Bucks county, Pa. I removed to the city of Philadelphia in the year 1846, and continued to reside there until 1866, when I removed to the city of New York. In Philadelphia I was in the furniture business. In New York I branched into machinery and inventions, and am the patentee of Luckenbach's pneumatic pulverizer which machines are now in use generally in eastern part of the United States and in Europe. I now reside in Denver, having removed from New York two years ago. I am well known in New York. I have been a member of the Produce Exchange and am well acquainted with many members of that body. I am well known by Mr. Erasmus Wilman. In the year of 1865, I visited London, England, for the purpose of placing there Pennsylvania oil properties in which I was interested. I took with me letters of introduction to many gentlemen in London, among them one to Mr. Ernest Seyd, from Robert M. Foust, ex treasurer of Philadelphia. I became well acquainted with Mr. Seyd and his brother, Richard Seyd, who, I understand, is yet living. I visited London thereafter every year, and at each visit renewed my acquaintance with Mr. Seyd, and upon each occasion became his guest one or more times joining his family at dinner or other meals. In February 1874, while on one of these visits and while his guest at dinner, I, among other things alluded to rumors afloat of Parliamentary corruption and expressed astonishment that such corruption should exist. In reply to this, he told me he would relate facts about American Congress that would place it far ahead of the English Parliament in that line.

So far the conversation was at the dinner table between us. His brother Richard and others were there also, but this was table talk between Mr. Ernest Seyd and myself. After the dinner ended he invited me to another room where he resumed the conversation about legislative corruption. He said: "If you will pledge me your honor as a gentleman not to divulge what I am about to tell you while I live, I will convince you that what I said about the corruption of the American Congress is true." I gave him my promise and he then continued: "I went to America in the winter of 1872-3, authorized to secure, if I could, the passage of a bill demoralizing silver. It was to the interests of those I represent—the governors of the bank of England—to have it done. I took with me £100,000 with instructions that was not sufficient to accomplish the object, to draw for another £100,000 or as much more as was necessary." He told me German bankers were also interested in having it accomplished. He told me that was the financial adviser of the bank. He said "I saw the committee of the House and Senate and paid the money and stayed in America until I knew the measure was safe."

I asked if he would give the names of the members to whom he paid the money, but this he declined to do. He said: "Your people will not now comprehend the far reaching extent of that measure, but they will in after years. What ever you may think of corruption in the English parliament, I assure I would not have dared to make such an attempt here as I did in your country." I expressed my shame to him for my countrymen in our legislative bodies. The conversation drifted into other subjects, and after that, though I met him many times, the matter was never again referred to.

IT IS NOT what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story of its merit. When in need of medicine remember HOOD'S CURES THE TONIC.

A Queer South American Bird With an Extraordinarily Large Bill.

A queer kind is the toucan. It seems to have been made expressly to take charge of its huge banana shaped beak, which, in some species, is fully 7 inches in length and more than 2 inches in width—entirely out of proportion to its comparatively small body. This bird is the most brilliant possession of the toucan, being orange and black, scarlet and yellow or green and red, according to the species of the bird.

Its home is in the wild South American woods, where, mingled with the screaming of parrots, macaws and other tropical birds, is heard its monotonous cry, "Tucano, tucano!" from which its name is probably derived. It is a fruit eater, and climbing among the branches it gathers its food with its long beak, whose strength no stem can resist.

The toucan nests in trees, and it is uncertain whether it excavates its burrow or builds in a natural cavity. Nothing more comical can be imagined than the head of this creature, with its sparkling eyes and enormous, gayly colored beak, appearing from a hollow in the trunk of some forest monarch.

It is said that the toucan is subject to the attack of monkeys and birds of prey, and that when the parent bird is attacked all she has to do is to poke her head out of the aperture leading to the nest. The assailant, seeing so huge a bill, fancies an animal of corresponding size behind it and leaves, without bowing or saying farewell.

Toucans are social birds and go in large flocks. They make common cause against their enemies, such as owls and falcons, which they surround and mob, as the rooks do in England. Having thus no need for protection, they are noisy and clamorous, like parrots and monkeys.

The plumage is generally black, but the throat is white, tinged with yellow and commonly edged beneath with red. The tail is nearly square or moderately rounded, with the upper feathers red and the lower scarlet. Alternations of the brighter colors are displayed in the feathers of the throat, the breast and the tail.

The bird is kept easily in confinement, and no doubt from early times many were brought alive to Europe. Some of its brilliant tints are very fleeting, and they often leave little or no trace after death, so that little idea of its beauty can be obtained from a stuffed specimen.—Philadelphia Times

The roots of the hair are each supplied with a blood vessel of its own and with proper nerves, though the latter do not extend into the hair itself. On the health of the roots of the hair the whole growth depends. On either side of the root and a little above it are two small glands, which secrete an oily substance that gives gloss to the hair, and the glands serve to protect the roots of the hair from becoming clogged with dust. Each separate hair is a hollow tube and through its length is conveyed the food essential to health and growth.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

RALLY AT LEHI.

C. C. Richards and Judge Henderson Speak

TO A CROWDED HOUSE.

Secretary Richards handles the topic Question and Judge Henderson Proves the Republican Party to Have Been Entirely Responsible for the Present Hard Times.

The convention at Lehi completed its labors on Saturday and adjourned at 5:30 o'clock. The time between that hour and 7 o'clock was enjoyed by the visitors scattered among the residents at their homes, and not one but enjoyed a good supper.

Shortly after 7 o'clock a monster torchlight procession was formed, headed by the Provo drum corps. The parade was over a half mile in length, and the excellent Lehi silver band brought up the rear. The whole town was stirred and alive, democratic enthusiasm was rampant and the reps. were made awfully sick.

The procession marched from Garfield's hall west toward the R. G. W. then north and east and south to place of beginning. The building was literally packed and scores of people turned away. The audience was addressed by C. C. Richards and Judge Henderson. Richards handled the tariff question very ably. He referred especially to the sugar factory, explaining how democrats encouraged home industry by patronizing them, in fact discussed the sugar question at length, quoting authoritative statements proving that the United States can raise sugar cheaper than can England and given free raw material can export sugar to any market. He was compelled to import it. The speaker also quoted some interesting figures concerning the manufacture of iron in the United States. The wool question was also handled ably and it was clearly shown that the two republican party had always legislated in favor of the classes and against the masses, but never in favor of the farmers.

The Lehi democratic glee club rendered a very appropriate selection after which Judge Henderson arose, and although he was not feeling well he delivered one of his talks, able logical and forceful addresses. He was received with unbounded enthusiasm and his remarks were listened to eagerly by all.

Mr. Henderson opened by referring to the history of the two great parties, showing that the democratic party was the only one of the two parties of today present at the foundation of the government. It had lived to put to sleep the predecessors of the republican party and this would go the way of all opposition to the grand old democratic party. The various tariff enactments by the republican administration were cited and Garfield, Blaine and other republicans who favored a reduced tariff, were quoted.

These Wonderful Americans in London. The American dentist is credited with many wonderful devices, but a London correspondent of The British Medical Journal has discovered an especially new and offensive invention. He says: "Some Americans are introducing here the practice of inserting diamonds for vulgar display into the front teeth. It is surely enough that our sense of decency and propriety should be so often shocked by unsightly gold crowns and fillings without being further offended by this new atrocity. I believe it has only just started here, and this, therefore, is the time to denounce it and is my excuse for troubling you."—Medical Record.
